

Disability Insurance for CSSE Members

Being affected by illness or injury is not always within your control. While medicine is successfully helping people live through serious sicknesses, living through disability doesn't always mean that you can continue to work full-time. And that's particularly alarming if—like many CSSE members—you are self-employed and have no other source of income.

Disability Insurance will set you up with a plan to cover your expenses should you become ill or injured for a significant period of time.

The CSSE team has partnered with PROLINK and the RBC Life Insurance Company to offer members a disability program at exceptional rates, up to 25% lower than RBC's standard rates. To convey a sense of cost, a 45-year-old non-smoking male earning $120,000 per year who estimates needing an after-tax income of $72,000 per year on disability would pay approximately $2,350 annually to get this coverage.

To explore the topic further, contact Kris Sabramsky of PROLINK—Canada's Insurance Connection to discuss your needs and evaluate options available to you. To take advantage of this offer, though, you must apply before September 15, 2018.
